Two Museums Bet Their Monets on the World Series

Milwaukee and St. Petersburg, Florida, will swap a famous painting depending on who wins

Baseball fans are not the only ones cheering in the World Series. Two art museums have made a friendly bet. The Milwaukee Art Museum is rooting for the Brewers, and the Museum of Fine Arts in St. Petersburg, Florida, is rooting for the nearby Tampa Bay Rays.

Here is the deal: the museum in the losing team's city will send a painting by Claude Monet to the winner's museum for a "victory lap in the galleries." St. Petersburg's would be Houses of Parliament: Effect of Fog, London. Milwaukee's would be Waterloo Bridge, Sunlight Effect, the only Monet it owns.

Monet painted many views of London and worked on them all at once, so he once wrote that he could not send off a single canvas. The Brewers lead the series 2 games to 0, and the museums will announce the loan details after the final game.

Halloween Weekend Fun Around Metro Detroit
